Reilly Stops Weber By Generalship In the Fourth Round

BOQUES WINS IN 8TH OVER MACK

Charlie Reilly, proving his title as a ring general of exceptional ability, on Saturday evening last, put a terrific right into Charlie Weber's mid-section in the course of the fourth round, that ended that boy's aspirations for the time being.

At no stage of the game was Weber in it. From the first pass, when Reilly jabbed him in the face, until the last, when he came up helpless after that right to the wind and was sent to dreamland under a volley of lefts and rights to the jaw, it was perfectly clear that he was entirely outclassed. Reilly jabbed for his face until he had Weber guarding there, and then drove some wallops home to the wind that would have stopped the town clock. They beat Weber.

Reilly is Brilliant.

The bout was a beautiful exhibition because of the clean work, the cool head, the excellent judgment, the lightning speed of Reilly. He has improved since his appearance with McFadden, even. His footwork is simply great. And the force of his blows has evidently improved very considerably. That stinging right, for instance, which tucked Weber's heart right up under his chin, seemed to sink into the softness of the body up to the wrist.

Weber was evidently no slouch, in his class, but he was not anywhere near the class of the peerless Reilly.

Chalmers to the Fore

Chalmers Graham, acting as master of ceremonies, opened the big show by bringing forth Jack Lamphere of China and introducing him as the challenger of any heavyweight in the islands. Chalmers further announced the fact that Lamphere had boxed three rounds here with Jack Johnson at one time in the past.

Charlie Mack and Charlie Boquet, two boys who were to furnish the preliminary event of the evening, were then introduced, at 140 pounds. Though this fact was not announced, the circumstance that Mack is a marine and Boquet a sailor added an interest to the bout.

Frankie Smith of San Francisco was then introduced as the referee of this bout. The men agreed to break clean.

The Preliminary

Mack led, but in the first exchange Boquet drew blood from the other's left eye. From that time, Mack was a bloody spectacle. They clinched, and as they came out of it Boquet sent him to the floor with a hard right. He came up groggy and was forced into the ropes. Blood from his eye covered Boquet's shoulder. Mack recovered and rushed as the gong sounded. Mack forced the pace for a minute in the second, but Boquet soon opened the sore eye again, and, a moment later, when Mack missed a wide swing, dropped him cleanly with a left to the chin. Mack came back gamely, and was rushing when the gong sounded.

Mack began to fight under for the body, but seemed to be somewhat weak, and the bout looked through the third and fourth like all Boquet's. In the fifth he had Mack stalling, and it seemed as though he would have put his man out had he followed up the wide leads left him.

Mack Stronger

But in the sixth Boquet was apparently tired, and Mack came up strong. Boquet missed, and they clinched. Boquet landed with right on the face, but his left slipped, and Mack swung in two hard rights to the body, and repeated. However, Boquet presently staggered him with another right, and they stalled out the round. Stalling most of the time in the seventh, Mack took the count as the gong sounded. Boquet had much the better of the eighth round, but failed to tuck his man away. When Smith held up Boquet's arm as a sign that he was victor, the crowd yelled its approval of the decision.

The Usual Challenges

Chalmers Graham announced that Frankie Smith challenged the winner of the main bout. The referee, who does not wish to appear in the limelight, was introduced, and received quite an ovation. Chalmers then introduced "Jack McFadden, whom everyone knows," who also challenged the winner of the coming contest. Joe Leahy was introduced, and challenged any lightweight in the islands. He was dubbed as the champion amateur featherweight of the Pacific Coast.

Reilly entered the ring first, amid cheers from the house, and took the corner nearest the audience. Weber followed him immediately into the ring. They were introduced, and weights announced as 128 pounds. Mike Patton was announced as time-keeper.

The Bout by Rounds

Gong Saves Weber

Round Three—Reilly comes out jabbing. He scores six times on Weber's face, and changes off to a wide left to the body that hurts. But Weber comes back gamely with his last flash in the pan. He sends in two right crosses to the face. Reilly comes at him fiercely. Every blow in the catalogue is sent into the unfortunate Weber. Reilly is working for the body, and Weber hanging on, trying to save himself. But it seems that he can't by any means get away from Reilly's terrible fists. The gong saves Weber, who is being beaten about the ring mercilessly.

The Knockout

Round Four—Reilly sails in hard. His first jab tosses Weber's head. They clinch, and Reilly sends in a left to the face, following with a rush that has Weber staggering wildly into a clinch. Again he goes after Weber hard, and the beaten one clinches to ward off the inevitable. He is weak. As they square away from the clinch, Reilly sinks his right with pile-driver force into the stomach, and Weber leans against him, gasping, going to the floor, under a volley of rights and lefts. He takes the count, and as he comes up he is met with a left that fairly cracks as it meets his chin. The left darts out again, and a stunning right shot out straight to the chin drops him. Weber is counted out.

A goodly crowd attended. The show was excellently managed, and in every way a clean and most satisfactory exhibition, characteristic of the usual good exhibitions given by Promoter Fred. Smith.

Chicago Puts Pittsburg Out of Race, and Still Leads

CHICAGO, Ill., Oct. 4.—Chicago defeated Pittsburg in the National Baseball League game here today, this victory giving the locals a good lead in the pennant race and eliminating Pittsburg from the contest. The race is now between Chicago and New York, with Chicago three games to the good.

DETROIT, Mich., Oct. 4.—The fight for the American League championship is still close, the Detroit team being ahead by only six points, with Cleveland, the second team in the list, only nine points ahead of Chicago.

NEW YORK, N. Y., Oct. 3.—Pittsburg has jumped to first place in the National Baseball League, the standing of the three leading National League clubs at the conclusion of today's games being: Pittsburg, 641; Chicago, 638; New York, 633. In the American League series the Detroit still hold their lead by a margin of ten points. The standing now is: Detroit, 593; Cleveland, 583; Chicago, 577.

ALAS GIVE DANCE

WITH MUCH SUCCESS

The Alala Athletic Club gave a dance last Saturday night which proved to be a big success.

The dance started at 8 p. m. and was well attended. Ho Tong, the floor manager, kept the crowd busy dancing until midnight. The Kailimal Glee Club furnished the music during the evening. Much credit is due to the committee for the success of this dance. Sam Hop and Manuel Correa constitute the committee in charge of the very enjoyable affair.

With the intention of challenging Frank Gotch, the world's champion wrestler, Yussif Mahmoud, champion of Bulgaria, arrived in the United States recently on the Columbia. Mahmoud has had a wonderfully successful career in Europe and has thrown every man he wrestled. He had a match scheduled with Hackenschmidt three weeks ago, but "Hack" dislocated his knee in training and the match was abandoned. Mahmoud is a giant in stature and his European admirers think him the coming champion. He believes he can defeat Gotch and the champion will probably meet Mahmoud in New York.
